I am pleased to announce that we have identified finalists for a new Vice President and Chief Academic Officer to succeed Paul Layer, who has announced plans to retire after a 35-year career at the University of Alaska, and more than 7 years in his current role. He'll be missed.

The search for the role – retitled Vice President/Chief Academic Officer – has been thorough, and a hiring committee representing the entire system has selected three finalists.

_____ is the founder and CEO of Accreditation Insights, and previously served as the chancellor of Methodist College.

_____ most recently served as the president of Rockland Community College, part of the State University of New York (SUNY) system.

_____ is the founding director of the Center for Excellence in Teaching and Learning at the University of Idaho, where he is also a professor of political science.

The candidates will be visiting Fairbanks October 23-25 for meetings with different stakeholder groups. To learn more about the finalists, including links to their CVs, please visit the VP-CAO finalists website.

We are planning a webinar forum for each of the candidates at 11 a.m. each day, set up as a Zoom webinar with governance members as panelists, and the webinar will be available to view for all other university affiliates; you will need to be logged in to your UA zoom account to access the webinar. Faculty Alliance Chair and search committee member Jennifer Carroll will host/moderate the forums.

We've also set up a question submission form where UA affiliates can submit questions to ask any/all of the candidates. A feedback form will be open from October 23 through October 30.

Following the candidate visits, in consultation with the committee and the Board of Regents, I will select a candidate and make an offer. We hope to have the new VP-CAO identified by mid-November. Vice President Layer has agreed to stay on for a period of
